BUILDING AND REPAIRING FARM FENCES

Sussex Gate-Hard for Cattle to Operate.

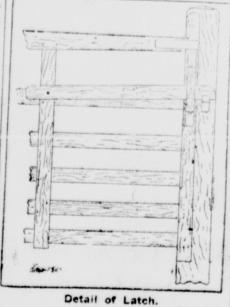

(By M. COVERDELL.)

This is one of the best seasons of the year for building and repairing es, as one can go out immediately after a soaking rain and set twice as many posts as he usually can, because of the softness of the ground.

Then the strenuous season that tries fences has just passed, and their repairing and building thus is more necessary. Also, if the ground should freeze before the work is done, these needed repairs cannot be done so easily or so efficiently.

By doing all fencing, gate hanging and repairing this fall, one will avoid having these jobs on hand when the rush season comes on next spring, at which time the work is apt to be neglected or slighted in the hurry to get to the field; so that the crops thus are exposed to the stock more than they should be through the entire summer season.

Good fences insure the farmer knowing right where he will find any stock vent the neighbors' stock from break- neighbors.

At no age are mongrei chickens so satable as pure breds. As to the land required, fowls will be contented and profitable whether they are confined in a house, allowed to range over a small or large enclosure or given entire liberty. The more closely they are confined, the greater the cost of food and the more attention they require. An ideal range for a flock of twenty-five to forty fowis in s house such as that described in the Clemson poultry bulletins is fifty by one hundred feet. Such a range in Bermuda sod and bur or crimson clover will be green all the year; the Bermuda being green in warm weath er and the clover in the winter. One and one-half acres will provide sufficient range for 500 bens. An orchard or partially wooded range is preferable to one that is barren of natural shade.

Cause of Winter Killing.

Trees should not be kept growing until too late in the fall because the wood should have plenty of time to mature before heavy frost, so that it will not winter kill. If trees severey winter kill they should be severely pruned and all the dead wood re- be hung heads down for a while to in-

Calculating the profi we be made in fall or winter, he ad-vises buying a breeding pen of young cost of five cents per pound and a Dr. R. P. Thomas selling price of eight cents, the profit per sow for a year would be $93.50, er a total for the three sows of $280.50.

If the size of the litters is small for one of many possible reasons, the profits will be severely cut. For instance, if the three sows produce only 30 pigs, the profit will be only $34 per sow, or $102 for the three. To return large profits, sows must produce large litters and pigs must have large quantities of good food.

Real money is lost by having cows calve in spring instead of fall.

It is a good rule to have every cow in a herd tested at least once a year for tuberculosis. To insure steady motion, a separa-for must be fastened to a solid foundation. A concrete floor gives this better than anything else.

Sometimes lack of exercise causes barrenness in dairy cattle. It is never well to allow the dairy cow to take on mauch fat. Always give her plenty of exercise.

The average cow in full milk flow will consume from thirty to forty pounds of silage to advantage. Add to this some ten pounds of dry fodder, and the roughage feed is complete.

Only concrete floors should be permitted in a dairy barn. They cost more, perhaps, originally, but they are the cheapest in the long run. For one thing, they make it possible to save some of the liquid manure, a very valuable item.

CO-OPERATION WANTED

One of the greatest needs today is that broad spirit in both the town and country which places community interest above individual interest, a spirit of harmonious co-operation rather than of discord. We believe our friends are doing the right thing in getting the farmers together in a new Farmers' club that will do the things that need to be done for the community. In such an organization, we believe the farmers should prove themselves as being broad-minded citizens by devoting their club work to real community problems. - The Little Bessie Smith.

Bessie, the class child of Mr. and Mrs. Rube Smith, and grandlaughter of our fellow-townsman, Mr. J. T. Smith, died at the home of her parents near Beeville Thursday, aged about wo and one-half years.

Little Bessie had been sick for some time and while her death was not entirely unexpected, it nevertheless proved a great shock to her fond parents, and her grandparents and other

Death is always sad, but doubly so when the victim of the grim reaper is an innocent little child.

What a consolation to the sorrowing parents must be the words of the Christ in this, their hour of grief: "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of Heaven."

To the stricken parents and relatives the Anvil Herald extends sincere sym-

ADVANTAGE IN PURE BREEDS

Unfailing Certainty-Produce More Eggs Than Scrube.

(By A. F. ROLF, Louisiana Experiment Pure breeds offer the following advantages over mongrels: (a) There is reliability in their breeding, for, having been purely bred for many generations they will produce their kind with unfailing certainty. (b) Every fair test that has ever been conducted has shown that the purebred chickens will give a greater egg production than the mongrels. (c) In a like manner it has been shown that the purebred chicken will give an improved quality of meat. (d) There is a greater uniformity in the size, shape and color of eggs and meat produced by the pure breed. (e) The first cost of purebreds is but slightly more than mongrels (f) The cost of keeping purebreds is no greater. (g) There is a more attractive ap-(h) There is more efficiency from the feed consumed when the flock is uniform (i) There is a good demand for purebred birds for breeding purposes. (j) This demand means a greater selling value, or, in other words, a greater income from a given number of birds.

USE OF MODERN IMPLEMENTS

Co-Operative Ownership of Machinery Enables Small Farmer to Compete With Capitalist.

We cannot urge too strongly the co-operative ownership or exchange of the use of expensive farm mawaste of capital tied up in idle farm machinery, but it enables the small Towards Amusements-Mr. Newel farmer to bring into use the same labor-saving machinery that is used by the capitalistic farmer, with whom he is thereby enabled to compete successfully in production, writes J. Z. Green in Progressive Farmer. With the change of our farming program in the South to include "more feed for stock and more stock to feed," the importance of the use of modern laborsaving implements and machines by the average farmer will be emphasized more than ever before. The average farmer isn't able to purchase, on his own account, all the needed farm machinery. It would be bad business for him to tie up moncy in expensive machinery for his own exclusive use. even if he had the surplus capital to invest that way. It is only through co-operation that he can have the use of these things in an economical way.
